WHO WOULDN'T TAKE THIS LURE?

It's a tourist trap, but visiting Oregonian Thomas G. Tyner willingly took the bait—"Miss Victoria," Anna Holden. Don't tell Nina, but that's the victim's wife getting all steamed up on the left. "You can take this welcoming jazz a bit too far!" she fumed. All is now well, however. Shirley Tyner was eventually cooled down by her hubby, a Portland firefighter. The couple were named "Tourists of the Week" by Victoria Jaycees and for their stay in the city will be given one whole day "on the house." "I don't usually kiss strangers," explained Nina, "but this is special." Mr. and Mrs. Tyner are the last of the Jaycees' guests this year. (Times Photo by Irving Strickland.)

BCE Takeover Method Scored by Lawyers

75 Cents
An Hour
Not Enough

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stipendiary Magistrate Roderick Haig-Brown estimated today that he gets about 75 cents an hour for sitting on the bench at Campbell River.

Mr. Haig-Brown, well-known as a naturalist and author, said in a telephone interview:

"Compensation for stipendiary magistrates in B.C. now is grossly inadequate. The system of payment is very bad. It's out of date and has no application."

He said B.C.'s stipendiary magistrates are paid by the case. They get $5 if the accused pleads guilty; $5 if he pleads not guilty and $10 for conducting a preliminary hearing.

He was commenting on a resolution adopted this week at the Canadian Bar Association convention at Winnipeg, urging appointment of more magistrates with better pay.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The recent takeover of the B.C. Electric Company by the British Columbia government was denounced by the Canadian Bar Association today in a resolution which empowered the Bar's B.C. section to question the provincial government "with respect to the deprivation of civil liberties and property rights inherent in the act."

The resolution over-rode opposition from some sections of the bar which wanted to water it down to a simple affirmation of the principle which would preserve property rights.

It said there was no provision made in the take-over for appeal against whatever price was paid to the owners of the shares, except by permission of the Attorney-General of B.C.

LOSS OF RIGHTS

The resolution adopted specifically named the B.C. Electric take-over, and deplored the extension of the Crown's immunity from law suits and the loss of property rights.

The resolution, referring to a bill passed at a special session of the British Columbia legislature last month, says that $1,704,134 preferred shares with a paid-up value of more than $104,000,000 had been issued to the public not only of Canada but also of the United States and the United Kingdom.

The resolution said these shares were "compulsorily" taken from the owners.

It said there was no provision made in the take-over for appeal against whatever price was paid to the owners of the shares, except by permission of the Attorney-General of B.C.

RESCUED AFTER SIX DAYS

Three Crash Survivors Lived on Berries, Fish

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Three men who lived on berries and fish for six days on the edge of an un-named lake 150 miles northeast of here were found and rescued Friday night.

Yellowknife pilot Jim Mc-

Avoy found the men huddled around a camp fire. He was completing more than 10 hours of air search.

The downed men — pilot Joe Harriman and passengers Lorne Wrigglesworth of Hamilton, and Blake Keller — were picked up immediately by McAvoy and flown here. All were in good shape.

Pilots McAvoy and Harriman are no strangers. It was Harriman who located McAvoy earlier this summer when McAvoy and his aircraft were the object of a three-day search.

Harriman's float-equipped Cessna 180 disappeared Aug. 27 on a 760-mile round-trip from here to Coppermine, N.W.T.

He said he was forced down on a lake by bad weather. When he attempted to take off water was found in the gas. After the gas was strained it was found there was not enough to leave.

THIS WORLD OF OURS

People and Things

NEW YORK — Broadcasting sources reported today that profanity aired on the American Broadcasting Company's John Cameron Swayze network news show Friday night.

About midway through his radio broadcast, Swayze came up with a sentence obviously not included in his script.

Some of the stations carrying the show cut it off, others let it continue until the ABC network itself finally cut off the broadcast.

ABC spokesman declined comment on the incident.

But it was learned that in putting the broadcast on audio tape, technical difficulties were encountered which required Swayze to start his show over several times.

With the difficulties ironed out finally, the show was ready for broadcast—except for the tape containing the profanity hadn't been erased and got on the air.

LONDON—Woman storekeepers in suburban Deptford today wondered where the white mice gang will strike next.

The gang, three in number and aged about eight, has robbed two stores in the district this week armed with about six trained mice.

The gang, keen observers of female nature, has worked out this operation:

One of the boys goes into a store and lets the mice run loose.

While the women scream and cower, two confederates dash in, grab something, retrieve the mice and make their getaway.

So far, their haul has been 30 shillings ($4.20), a toy pistol and three lead soldiers.

LONDON, Ont.—Any day now Alvin Garlick of suburb London will be bringing his 1929 model car into the city for its first 1,500-mile checkup.

He took the car to a city garage recently for a 1:000-mile check, but decided to postpone the operation for another 500 miles because it was running so well.

To mechanics who looked incredulously at the mile-meter reading he explained that the two-door Chevrolet had been on the blocks in a garage since 1930. His uncle, who owned it until last July, didn't like driving it.

GLASGOW—A truck approaching a ship made a sudden lurch in the dock area Friday—and 1,800 bottles of export whisky were scattered over the pavement.

Dozens of dock workers flocked to the scene to tidy up the situation. It was cleaned up in a jiffy.

The truck driver estimated that "a few dozen bottles" were recovered for export to New York.

NEW YORK—Former President Harry Truman, arriving in New York for a visit, was asked which side he favored in the city's bitter fight for the Democratic primary nomination for mayor.

For once, Truman ducked.

"It's like a person stepping between a man and his wife having a fight," he said. "The first thing you know he gets hit by both of them."

Logging in Nfld. Resumes Wednesday

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Newfoundland's loggers, kept out of the woods this summer by forest fires, will go back to work next Wednesday and the province's fall hunting season will open as scheduled Sept. 11.

The announcements were made Friday night by Resources Minister W. J. Keough. He said the long-range forest fire danger has diminished to such an extent that the two-month ban on power saws in the woods can be lifted Tuesday midnight.

Sooke and North Sooke Women's Institute Friday won second prize of $30 for its entry to B.C. Tree Fruits home-preserving competition at Pacific National Exhibition.

The institute was runner-up in the same contest a year ago, and this year was topped only by Penetinon Women's Institute, in the heart of the tree fruit country.

Sooke's entry was canned by Mrs. Alan Smith, and consisted of three bottles each of peaches and apricots.

A total of 17 districts in B.C. took part in the competition, and prize money goes to general work of the institutes in the winning communities.

AS SHEFFIELD WEDNESDAY MOVES TO TOP

'Spurs Edge Cardiff

LONDON (AP)—Centre forward Bobby Smith headed in a goal with four minutes left to give Tottenham Hotspur, defending English League champions, a 3-2 victory over Cardiff City in a soccer match before a crowd of 40,000 in London today.

Tottenham trailed 2-0 early in the second half, but goals by halfback Danny Blanchflower and another by winger Cliff Jones tied the score.

Sheffield Wednesday shot to the top of the First Division standings with a 4-0 away victory over Everton. The win gave Sheffield a points total of eight from five matches. Manchester City lost 3-1 at home to Burnley, and surrendered an unbeaten record. Manchester City also has eight points but an inferior goal average to Sheffield.

MANCHESTER UNITED WINS

Manchester United, which won 3-2 at Blackpool, Tottenham and Burnley, each have seven points.

A crowd of 43,000 turned out for the Everton-Sheffield Wednesday clash—but the home fans found little to cheer about.

Sheffield led 1-0 at half-time on a lucky goal by halfback Tony Kay and then roared ahead on goals by winger Tom McNearney, inside-right Bob Craig and centre-forward Keith Ellis.

Another crowd of 40,000 was at the Manchester City-Burnley match. Left-winger Gordon Harris put Burnley ahead after eight minutes. Inside-forward Jimmy McIlroy made it 2-1 after 14 minutes and by halftime. Bobby Charlton banged in another after 22 minutes.

MATTHEWS STILL OUT

Blackpool, still without injured Stanley Matthews, was two goals down after 22 minutes against Manchester United. Inside-right Dennis Violette scored after two minutes and left-winger Bobby Charlton banged in another after 22 minutes.

Tests will be conducted to determine what effect, if any, the two-day ride through outer space had on the tissue.

Perilous Brinkmanship

WHATEVER MR. KHRUSHCHEV's current objectives may be, he seems determined to pursue them without regard for world opinion, and particularly for the opinion of the so-called uncommitted nations.

He had tacitly acknowledged a tremendous propaganda defeat in Berlin, where brick walls, barbed wire barricades and armed guards bear testimony to the fact that force must be used to keep the population from escaping Communist domination.

And now, with brutal suddenness, he has threatened the whole human race with destruction, either quick or slow, by announcing that he will resume nuclear bomb testing. He couples this threat with the boast that Russia has a super-bomb against which no underground shelter can be effective.

This is a show of naked power which has not been seen since the raving Hitler led his country into war. The implications are obvious: do as I wish or pay the penalty.

There has been no excuse for this action. The abortive nuclear test negotiations at Geneva had not reached any sudden point of crisis demanding a complete renunciation of bargaining. Russia is not threatened by invasion. The only explanation for Mr. Khrushchev's sweeping move is that he has decided that only a show of ruthless power will win him what he wants in Berlin—or perhaps in some other quarter not yet revealed.

Against such a background his expressed abhorrence of war, his public agreement that a nuclear conflict would mean destruction for most of the world, his challenges to the United States to conduct their rivalry in agricultural and industrial production instead of on a military basis—all these appear to mean nothing.

Hitler rallied his nation by convincing the people that they were being encircled. He set in motion vast forces that could not be stopped. Mr. Khrushchev appears to be following the same policy. Over the past few weeks he has continually warned his people against Western war plots, assured them that they were lined up in the gun sights of warmongers, and kept them in ignorance of what has been going on in Berlin and East Germany.

This is brinkmanship of a very serious nature. These are desperate measures which have no regard for the heretofore important factor of public opinion in the uncommitted countries—twenty-four of which are now meeting in Belgrade to discuss their position in the centre of the East-West contest. The goodwill of Mr. Nehru, for instance, normally considered a powerful factor in world affairs, seems to be written off with this contemptuous resort to nuclear tests.

What does this all mean? Does Mr. Khrushchev face some critical internal problem at home, to meet which he must stir up outside trouble? Does he believe that Russia, with its rocketry and nuclear bomb strength, is now in a position to dispense with negotiation and niceties and demand what it wants on pain of destruction? Is this a build-up of pre-conference terrors so that when the problem of Berlin is discussed in the near future he can win through inculcated fear what he could not gain through negotiation?

There is no way of telling at the moment. But there may be strong suspicion that the ancient adage: "All power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely" is taking its toll of Mr. Khrushchev's reasoning powers. If so, Marshal Tito's description of the world as being led "to the brink of the greatest catastrophe in history," may be perilously close to the truth.

Politics All the Way

THE OTTAWA JOURNAL, LIVING on terms of peculiar intimacy with the federal government, may reflect its mind when considering the future of the Canadian Labor Congress.

A few months hence, as The Journal says, the CLC will present its annual brief to the cabinet, asking for various reforms useful to labor unions.

Up to now the present government, and all its predecessors, received the labor delegates as men concerned solely with the daily business, the needs and the grievances of the working people without regard to political parties.

But the CLC has lately joined the New Democratic Party. As Mr. William Dodge, CLC executive vice-president, said in a speech at Baltimore the other day: "We have joined hands with people who are our friends and who believe in the same things we believe in; to found a political party of our own—we are now, in politics in Canada, all the way."

This change, says The Journal, is of immense significance. "In the past when the CLC waited on the government the prime minister and his cabinet (of any government) were disposed to give the Congress as much as they could, partly for humanitarian reasons, partly because prime ministers are political animals and want to retain and obtain votes. But as things will be now, a prime minister will find it hard to forget that the CLC is in effect a political opponent who will make political capital out of anything the CLC appears to gain by its submission."

Probably it will make even more capital out of the government's rejection of its demands. In any case, The Journal concludes, "Labor leaders have as much right as anyone else to become involved in politics," but "their problem will be in serving both a party and the labor movement without damaging either, or both."

Canada's Mathematics

THE ORGANIZATION FOR European Economic Co-operation, deplored the lack of scientists, engineers and technicians in the free world, set up a commission to study the educational systems of eighteen European and two North American countries. In particular the commission tried to find out how these countries teach mathematics, a primary tool in all technical professions.

Canada's teaching methods in this important field, the commission finds, are the most obsolete in the whole West. For example, high school teachers of mathematics are much better trained in Europe than in America, especially Canada. Speaking of this country, the commission reports that "there is no trend toward change" and the present program, established in 1900, has not been seriously re-examined since then.

Canada and the United States, the report adds, are the only two of the twenty countries investigated which "have no distinct mathematics programs for college-preparatory students of varying interests." By the age of 17, in all countries except Canada, Greece and the U.S., all science students are studying calculus."

This is serious criticism from well-qualified and impartial European educators. We don't know whether it is justified or not but the reply of Canadian educators, if they have one, would be interesting.

No Longer Fantasy

SOME CANADIANS, AND THEIR government, may still assume that the idea of a North Atlantic trading community is only a chimera, or a gleam in Mr. Pearson's eye. But the hard-headed London Economist, one of Britain's most influential publications, takes a different view.

As The Economist sees—so do statesmen like Mr. Macmillan—An Atlantic community is the logical next step after the union of Britain and the European Six. And it is the only step adequate to meet a new economic situation throughout the free world, the challenge of the Communist offensive everywhere and the needs of Canada in particular.

vague, has come into focus. To suppose that the enlarged European union may lead in turn to an Atlantic union no longer smacks of fantasy. It may be this, and the new perspectives it could open for the Commonwealth, that will enable the British nation to make its entry into Europe without looking back."

As The Economist sees—so do statesmen like Mr. Macmillan—An Atlantic community is the logical next step after the union of Britain and the European Six. And it is the only step adequate to meet a new economic situation throughout the free world, the challenge of the Communist offensive everywhere and the needs of Canada in particular.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

AS we hike along some of the byroads these late summer days there are many things we can see. Harvest time is here and it applies to most things in nature.

Look at the tall Douglas firs and see how the branches are drooping with the brown gold of the pendant cones.

If you spot a Balsam fir you will have to look to the top of the tree for its fruit.

This tree develops its cone high in the crown. They look like candles around a Christmas tree hence the name "candle tree" in some places. When the cone is ripe the tree will shed seeds and bracts, the spike will be left standing, and will show up sharp and brown against the shiny green of the needles.

The fruits of the Dogwood are now red and the robins and other birds are finding them a wonderful source of food.

The Arbutus with its drooping yet low-red clusters makes a beautiful sight against the shiny leaves. This is a favorite hunting ground for the band-tailed pigeon.

You may come across the red and green berries of the "bittersweet" belonging to the nightshade family. This plant will climb and if you crush the berries they give off a somewhat sweet smell.

The purple flower of the Douglas Aster may catch your eye as you ramble along.

FROM WASHINGTON

A Dozen Nations in Ferment and the U.S. Has No Guide

MR. WOODWARD, the new assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs has admitted that he was "perplexed" by the events that forced Señor Quadros to resign as president of Brazil. This frankness does him credit but it provokes no fair measure of the incredible lack of information in Washington about political conditions in Brazil. President Kennedy is being badly served by the experts in the state department who are advising him on Latin American affairs.

Since January the government of Brazil has received nearly $300 million in direct grants from the United States in emergency aid, and in surplus food sold for local currencies. On two separate occasions President Kennedy has sent personal envoys to discuss Brazil's problems with Quadros.

Secretary of the Treasury Dillon worked closely with the Brazilian delegation at the recent Uruguay conference where the Alliance for Progress program was launched. President Quadros had accepted an invitation to visit President Kennedy in December and they had planned to motor across the country from coast to coast accompanied by one of Mr. Kennedy's assistants.

In view of this association it would seem to be a not unreasonable assumption that officials in Washington would be aware of the major political trends in Brazil.

The shocking fact must be reported that the administration in Washington was taken completely by surprise and had to improvise an awkward and uncertain response to events beyond its understanding and control.

Last week, when the first news reached Washington of President Quadros' dramatic statement resigning the office of the presidency, the highest officials in the Kennedy administration charged with responsibility for Latin American affairs dismissed the statement as a spectacular bid by Quadros to come back to power on his own terms and with an unqualified mandate to carry out his program as he saw fit.

The statement was flatly made that there was no one else in the public life of Brazil who could direct the national fortunes of the country.

They compared Quadros' action to the brief resignation of Ben Gurion as prime minister of Israel—a resignation followed by the assumption of still greater power. All this was not better than dangerous nonsense.

Quadros has been denounced by political groups in Brazil as a man who preferred his own peace of mind to the welfare of his country. He has been accused of running away from a post of public responsibility because of the dangers and difficulties that faced him.

Quadros has now left for Europe

They compared Quadros' action to the brief resignation of Ben Gurion as prime minister of Israel—a resignation followed by the assumption of still greater power. All this was not better than dangerous nonsense.

Quadros has been denounced by political groups in Brazil as a man who preferred his own peace of mind to the welfare of his country. He has been accused of running away from a post of public responsibility because of the dangers and difficulties that faced him.

Quadros has now left for Europe with his family. He plans to return to Brazil some weeks from now. In the confused political situation of Brazil, it is quite possible that he may once again take charge of the country's affairs; but never on the terms which he fore-saw when he abruptly resigned.

His own prestige has been tarnished, his political following has been scattered, and the people of Brazil no longer regard him as their indispensable leader.

He would lead Brazil, if he returned to power, either by the support of the armed forces or by drastic concessions in his controversial program. He could not carry on as if no shock to his personal and political leadership had taken place.

As the largest state in Latin America, the influence of Brazil is widespread and profound. Many other governments look to Brazil as a model for their own policies. That is why the example of Brazil may be so destructive of the hopes aroused by the Alliance for Progress Program.

For Quadros tried to do the two things which President Kennedy has described as the preconditions for American aid under the new program. He tried to reform the tax structure of Brazil, and he tried to establish a system of land reform.

Both these measures brought him into fierce controversy with the powerful minority which has for so long shaped and controlled the economic life of Brazil. These critics were able to strengthen their indictment of Quadros by pointing to his friendship with Premier Castro and other members of the Cuban government. But their real target was reform inside Brazil, not the political flirtation with Cuba.

The state department is now saying that the whole Alliance for Progress

Program will be in danger if other governments in Latin America are afraid to put their tax policies and their land policies on a new basis acceptable to Washington as indicating the dawn of greater social democracy in this hemisphere.

It is, of course, mere malice to suggest—as Cuba and Russia have suggested—that the United States overthrew the Quadros government by the underhand activities of the Central Intelligence Agency in Brazil. The stark and disturbing fact is that the United States was the helpless and ill-informed spectator of events in Brazil that were totally beyond its political knowledge or its power of control.

Mr. Kennedy needs to improve his Latin American advisers if further fiascos are to be avoided. Nor can he delay this change very long. A dozen nations are in ferment and Washington is without any valid guide to their thinking or their hopes.

This is an ideal situation to cause maximum discomfort to the United States and to provide maximum opportunity for those who wish to stir up political unrest in Latin America for their own selfish or wicked ends.

In the shoreside Shaukiwan district of Hong Kong a 25-year-old priest of Tam Kung, protective god of fishermen, performs a ritual sword dance in front of his temple, dressed in white and blindfolded with red scarf. Then, with his sword in one hand and a duster in the other, he leads a procession around the district, dispelling disease from the houses he passes with magic gestures of his hands, while fishwives crowd into the temple itself to burn incense and pray.

But Tam Kung is not for everybody, despite his reputation as a healer. The multitudinous building population of Hong Kong appeals to quite another deity—Monkey, "the sage equal to Heaven," whose image is set up in many households, flanked by a sounding glass which tinkles when his spirit is present.

Communist China has vigorously denied any suggestion that the disease has spread to Hong Kong and Macao from the mainland, but the Macao Health Department received first reports of an outbreak of cholera in South China on Aug. 5.

Refugees say that there are now more than 30,000 cases on the mainland. While dismissing such claims as propaganda spread by American agents, the Chinese have themselves launched a health campaign in the southern provinces against "seasonal diseases" that are likely to break out.

Medical workers have been mobilized to fan out from Canton in order to ensure the health of the rural commune members by seeing that drinking water is boiled, decayed fruits and vegetables are destroyed, and flies and mosquitos kept down.

In Communist as in capitalist territory all modern measures are being taken. But in this region there are also other resources.

In the shoreside Shaukiwan district of Hong Kong a 25-year-old priest of Tam Kung, protective god of fishermen, performs a ritual sword dance in front of his temple, dressed in white and blindfolded with red scarf. Then, with his sword in one hand and a duster in the other, he leads a procession around the district, dispelling disease from the houses he passes with magic gestures of his hands, while fishwives crowd into the temple itself to burn incense and pray.

But Tam Kung is not for everybody. Despite his reputation as a healer, the multitudinous building population of Hong Kong appeals to quite another deity—Monkey, "the sage equal to Heaven," whose image is set up in many households, flanked by a sounding glass which tinkles when his spirit is present.

There is one couple, who have been coming to camp beside the Falls for 34 years in succession. They came from their home in California in the early years, and then later, when they were married, to New York, they still made the trip without fail every year. In the last few years their Cadillac has borne a Florida license plate, but they still keep coming. Doesn't that speak for itself?

There are any number of things to do there. The pool by the river trail is always inviting, and seven miles away the sea provides a change when you get tired of fresh water. The boffin from the Fisheries Research department was taking the sea temperature one day last week when we were laz-ing on the shore: it was 71 degrees.

What, I ask you, has Antiques or St. Tropez got that Qualicum hasn't?

Occasionally, over the radio, the discordant notes of the international hymns of hate made themselves heard, though dimly, as if the sound of human folly found it hard to penetrate the thick green cover of the camp. Whatever may be going on in Brazil or the Congo, or the heart of Berlin, all peace at Qualicum, and while I am not preaching isolationism, I would suggest that a short rest from the sound of what, in the seventeenth century, was called "clarification," is a wonderful tonic for nerves stretched tight by the inimicities of universal doom.

Take ten days in the sun and half a dozen assorted books, with no deadlines or telephone bells, and peaceful surroundings of natural beauty, and you should feel at peace, which is a step in the right direction, anyway.

The Sound of Human Folly Finds It Hard to Penetrate

NO two people, I suppose, have the same idea as to what makes a perfect holiday, which is almost certainly to say the least, if we all arrived at the same place at the same time, intent on a quiet and restful sojourn. There are those whose notion of a jolly time is to cram into an automobile and drive five hundred miles a day for ten days, returning with the rear windows plastered with garish little transfers and a bad case of "freeway stretch" (a complaint caused by the necessity to swivel the head constantly from side to side in order to keep an eye on cars overtaking on both sides at eighty miles an hour). It is, undeniably, an achievement to cheat the funeral parlours of a dozen states and return to tell the tale, but I am by nature too cowardly, or too indolent, to play this game.

I prefer to drive as little as possible on a holiday, and my idea of a perfect place is somewhere quiet, close to nature and far from the bazaars and char

REPORTING

Waring

OTTAWA — Trade Minister Hees' quick negative reaction towards the Ontario Conservative leadership was a surprise only in the sense that anyone should have presumed to suggest he would be interested.

The trade minister is engrossed in and content with his present job—and with his present prospects. For if the Conservative party had to find a new national leader tomorrow, George Hees would be the man to beat.

This is partly because Hees, with the not inconsiderable aid of his ubiquitous aide, Mel Jack, has turned in an excellent performance as administrator and political head of the departments of Transport and of Trade and Commerce. But equally importantly, it is because the list of potential Tory leaders is getting shorter. So short that the question, "Who else have the Tories got?" could almost be answered by "Nobody."

If there were immediate need for the Tories to pick a new leader, Finance Minister Fleming probably would try again. He has a bulldog tenacity that does not easily accept defeat.

But even Tory MPs have privately washed out Fleming as leadership timber since his political and moral defeat by the former governor of the Bank of Canada, James E. Coyne. Inconceivable though the idea would have been to the government three months ago, public sympathy seems to have swung behind banker Coyne. Reports from the hustings say the voters are much less concerned about Coyne's "doubled pension" than about the government's refusal to give Coyne his day in court before the Commons committee on banking.

As an election issue for the Conservatives, the fight with Coyne was a fizzle. As a personal triumph for Donald Fleming, it was a disaster.

Liberal politicians here speculate that Fleming may throw in his hand and take a judgeship before the next election. But whether he runs or not, they are planning a major effort in his riding of Toronto-Eglinton. For the first time in years they are hopeful of winning there. Until the Coyne affair the Liberal nomination in Eglinton could have been had almost for the asking. Now there's keen competition for it.

Justice Minister Fulton, who like Fleming opposed John Diefenbaker in 1956, has proven a liberal-minded, imaginative and even brilliant administrator within the rather narrow confines of the justice portfolio. But as leadership timber he evokes little enthusiasm among his colleagues. Fulton has been credited with the best mind on the Tory side of the House, but a fine mind is not the prime prerequisite for a vote-getting political leader.

Other ministers may have leadership ambitions—Agriculture Minister Hamilton, for example—but only Foreign Minister Green has the stature to inject himself into the picture, and like his chief, Green is pushing 66.

Premier Frost of Ontario is quitting at 66, leaving Duff Roblin, the 44-year-old premier of Manitoba, as the only provincial Tory politician showing the qualities a national leader should have.

Diefenbaker's successor, whoever he may be, may have a long wait. Diefenbaker hopes still to be prime minister in 1967, the centennial year. But Roblin can wait. And at 51, so can Hees.

5 'MUST UNDERSTAND RUSS AIMS'

Negotiations on Berlin Can Succeed—John D.

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker charted the course Friday night for negotiations with Russia and East Germany which should, he said, guarantee freedom and free access to West Berlin without war.

The freedom of West Berlin, and the right of the West to uphold that freedom, are not negotiable, but there are things that are," he said.

He said he could not spell them out in detail because the West must preserve a bargaining position.

MUST HAVE GUARANTEES

But at another point in his speech he said the grounds on which a peaceful solution could be achieved were guarantees that the U.S.S.R. in transferring East Berlin administration to the puppet government of East Germany, has no intention:

1. "To change the social order in West Berlin."

2. "To cut the links between West Berlin and West Germany," or:

3. "To attempt to impose a settlement in violation of fundamental democratic principles."

The Soviet leaders say they have no such intention. Mr. Diefenbaker told the annual banquet of the Canadian Bar Association, "If they mean that, then we have indeed the basis for peace."

The people of Canada, Mr. Diefenbaker added, were asking whether the Western nations were "courting war over a rubber stamp" by refusing to accept East German instead of Russian signatures on check-point passes on the route to West Berlin.

He dismissed any line of thinking that Canada, having made sacrifices in two world wars with Germany, was willing to let West Berlin go by the boards. Under NATO, any attack on Berlin will be regarded as an attack on Canada, he declared.

DEFY REASON

The prime minister said the West must realize that Russia has vital interests, and fears, and the West should seek to understand them "even though sometimes Soviet policies defy the laws of reason."

"I cannot believe that Khrushchev does not realize that by an overt act or by error or miscalculation, mankind may be obliterated," he said.

"I hope he will realize this fact—that we have accepted co-existence. The only alternative is non-existence."

Pearson Sparks Wrangle

OXFORD, England (CP)—The cold war intruded openly in the final sessions of a conference aimed at helping eliminate tensions from the development of countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

The wrangle developed over the report of the political seminar headed by Canada's Lester Pearson, but dissenters seemed in a minority of 75 leaders from five continents.

Ben Barka, left-wing politician from Morocco, challenged the report but had praise for the sessions which enabled a "free exchange of views."

"The magnetic tensions of the cold war have influenced some of the phrasing of the political report," he said.

Mehta, a soft-spoken Indian, noted in his report that there are forms of neo-colonialism other than domination of Asian and African powers by European states.

These include economic domination of backward countries, annexation of a neighboring country or area.

He referred to what he described as Chinese annexation of Tibet.

"In many parts of Asia there is a genuine apprehension of such expansionism and the expression, 'neo-colonialism' is frequently applied to the phenomena," Mehta added.

A WRITER'S DIARY

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

Most of us, at some time, are called on to assist in naming a fellow creature, whether as parents, godparents or family friends. Considering the opportunity, it is astonishing how little ingenuity is displayed. More and more boys are dismissed from the font to swell the battalions of Johns; mighty armies of girls go from playpen to funeral parlor as Mary.

Not that I find fault with John and Mary as names; on all counts—euphony, tradition and suitability—they are admirable. But it is possible to have enough even of a good thing.

Asking for ingenuity in naming children is, I know, a dangerous folly. We have all met grown-men and women who were burdened with unhappy, tasteless names. Girls are the most frequent sufferers. Who has not known an aging Birdie? Who has not met a spiration.

Names Have Ancient Meanings

There are guides to which they must find a name for a child, and I recommend The Oxford Dictionary of English Christian Names, by E. G. Withycombe.

It gives the derivation, meanings, frequency of occurrence and variations of a large number of names. It will help you not only with John (which means "Jah is gracious") to Mary (which rather oddly means "rebellion") but also guide you to some uncommon names like Urban and Consilio.

Many people are surprised to learn that names have meanings; they apparently assume that a name is merely a more or less pleasant sound used to distinguish one human creature from another.

Biblical Sources Out of Fashion

In the study of names national and cultural lines are strongly suggested; Hebrew names frequently ask for blessing, Greek names signify moral or intellectual qualities, and Celtic names refer to physical attributes.

Let us demonstrate: Jessica (Hebrew) means "God is looking"; Euphemia (Greek) means "honor"; Bronwen (Celtic) means "white breast." There are many contradictions to this generalization, but it is clear enough to be of interest.

Biblical names have passed out of fashion; but we may be sure that they will return.

The most Biblically named man I ever heard of bore the Christian name "Timothy Titus Philemon" which are the names of the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth books of the New Testament; though somewhat excessive, it makes a handsome array and he bore it proudly.

With Hebrew names we encounter a common trouble: what sounds well and has dignity in the original tongue may have a barbarous ring in the ears of another nation. Ker-ehappuch, for instance, possesses an elegance to Hebrew speakers which we entirely miss.

So, too, with the Welsh "Blodwen" which has a nuance for the Celt unappreciated by Saxons, to whom the word suggests a disagreeable type of sausage. So also with many fine Irish names, such as Ciaran, Dymphna, and Malise.

In his native land no man was more splendidly named than the late Aneurin Bevan, but his English-speaking detractors did not hesitate to confuse his name with "Aneurism," not to speak of less delicate medical terms.

Naming a child is a serious business. It should be approached through a vision of long and honorable life, and not merely of youth; great numbers of people refuse to give their children fine names because these might be distorted by school friends (or enemies)—as if schooldays were the longest or most important period of life.

But I cannot rid myself of the feeling that to give a child a good name is to set him well on the path toward a good life. The range of possibilities deserves to be explored.

Latest 'Inside' Book Superficial Glossary

INSIDE EUROPE TODAY, by John Gunther. The Musson Book Company Ltd. $4.95.

Reviewed by J. C. M. Oglesby (Assistant Professor of English, Royal Roads)

Globe-girding Gunther has come up with another "inside" job. This is his seventh work with an "inside" title and based upon past reputation this book will be another lucrative one.

But why? Anyone with an interest in world affairs can read reputable journals of opinion and find more perceptive and penetrating analyses; and biographical sketches of the leading European figures are constantly before our eyes.

Gunther just brings these under one cover and adds a few anecdotes for reader interest.

The book is very superficial, and even dangerously so, for it leads the average person to believe that he is actually achieving some understanding of the European situation, when he is merely being exposed to some interesting facts that might be useful in a quiz program, i.e., "Several curiosities about Denmark should be noted . . . since 1513 . . . monarchs have alternately been named Christian or Frederik . . . There have been ten Christians, nine Frederiks."

Or one learns that Harold Macmillan recently read all fourteen volumes of Froude's History of England for relaxation.

Soviet spies desperately trying to keep up with all the classified information daily divulged in Western democratic newspapers can take a breather for Gunther lists such things as the location of all the U.S. air bases in England (taken from the pages of the Observer), and reassuringly, presents the total number of U.S. forces abroad with the specific numbers as signed to each country.

But tremulous Americans in turn can register in their files, allies and enemies, because the author neatly points out those leaders of European countries for or against the United States.

Max Petitpierre, president of Switzerland, can breathe easier now, that it is in print that "He is thoroughly pro-American, but has never visited the United States."

Mr. Gunther leaves one wondering whether a visit to the United States might not change that neutral nation's outlook. But he probably did not mean it that way.

In some ways Inside Europe is enlightening for those who see everything occurring between the East and the West.

ART IN REVIEW

By ARTHUR CORRY

Victoria Well Served Through National Gallery

With the Victoria Art Gallery about to open an exhibition next week entitled "American Prints Today (1959)", I wondered if the average person realises where this display originated and how, and why, we are able to show it in this city?

American Prints were organized by the Print Council of America, New York, with special grants from the Avalon and Old Dominion Foundations. It represents a cross-section of the best work done in this field in the United States between 1936 and 1958.

The prints were exhibited in 16 leading American museums in 1959-60 and circulated in France in 1960-61.

In Canada they are circulating under the 1961-62 program of the National Gallery in an effort to bring more works of art into a greater number of Canadian communities.

To quote Miss Nora McCullough, the western representative of the National Gallery, who you will remember, delivered a lecture with slides on pictures in the national collection at our gallery last spring, "the demand for our exhibitions clearly indicates that we are doing an educational job

In January we will be privileged to see a collection of color prints by George Baxter. These collector's items are part of the William Crowley-Jephcott collection given to the National Gallery by his daughter, Mrs. John Edwards-Evans, of Toronto.

George Baxter covers the whole of the Victorian Period, which drew to a close about a hundred years ago with the death of the Prince Consort in 1861.

Baxter produced his first prints in 1829 and retired in 1860. He was among the first to make color prints available to ordinary people and was one of the most popular printers of his day.

These fifty-four prints portray a charming and pretty world. The exquisitely detailed little pictures show that reverence for fine craftsmanship which still prevailed even in an era when craftsmen were waging a losing battle with mechanical means of production.

In March the Art Gallery will exhibit the Fourth Biennial Exhibition of Canadian Art.

The first time the National Gallery has had an "open"

show, the Biennial consists of ninety-one paintings and graphics by eighty-one artists.

The only local artist represented in the Biennial is Margaret Petersen, one of six women for the whole of Canada. It will be an honor to see this display and to see the scope or trend of Canadian art.

Personally I have had firsthand reports that the show is not all that it should be, but we will see when the exhibitions arrive next March.

The following exhibit, coming directly from the National Gallery, in April, is titled

"Recent Acquisitions of Prints

and Drawings to the National Collection," Kathleen M. Fenwick, curator of prints, has selected a range covering 500 years, from mid-fifteenth century to contemporary Canadian artists.

During the 1960-61 season, circulating exhibitions reached more than 250,000 individuals and although it is not always visible and certainly not advertised, that "this is an exhibit from the National Gallery," the national institution does its work quietly and without applause.

This main purpose of sponsorship has brought works of art into an increasing number of Canadian communities from Victoria, B.C., to St. John's, Newfoundland.

George Baxter covers the whole of the Victorian Period, which drew to a close about a hundred years ago with the death of the Prince Consort in 1861.

Baxter produced his first prints in 1829 and retired in 1860. He was among the first to make color prints available to ordinary people and was one of the most popular printers of his day.

These fifty-four prints portray a charming and pretty world. The exquisitely detailed little pictures show that reverence for fine craftsmanship which still prevailed even in an era when craftsmen were waging a losing battle with mechanical means of production.

It offers virtually nothing for the intelligent and inquiring reader, but will undoubtedly be a best-seller, for who can resist the invitation to read "American journalism at its adult, superbly readable best."

The Sounding Board
By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

A couple of acquaintances of mine were discussing proposed centennial projects yesterday over lunch. They were, I may say, in a pessimistic mood.

"It all depends," said one, "what the committee in general conceives to be the city's future role. If they want it to preserve its reputation for quiet cud-chewing rumination they'll probably plump for Pioneer Square."

"Oh," I said, trying to look on the bright side; "no responsible citizen of a capital city could possibly think of a centennial project as anything so uninspiring."

That's what you think."

said acquaintance No. 2. French horn player Bruce Dunn—who was selected to become a part of the Canadian National Youth Orchestra at Stratford, Ont., this summer.

Fergus, a tympanist, found the experience terrific. He made first position in the percussion section and had a one-and-a-half-hour private lesson six days a week from Thomas Burry, the tympanist of the Toronto Symphony.

In addition, there was a full hour's daily ear-training session with Dr. John Weinzwig, Royal Conservatory professor and well-known composer.

"We have full orchestra rehearsals from 9:10 a.m. daily until noon and again from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Ear-training lessons and individual practice sessions went on all afternoon."

EXPANSION PROGRAM

Theatre School Seeks $250,000

A five-point campaign to raise $250,000 this year for the National Theatre School of Canada will get under way between Oct. 1 and 15, it was announced from Montreal.

The summer session concluded with a concert in the Stratford Festival Theatre on a Sunday afternoon. And Fergus didn't tell me this. I learned it from another source former Victoria musician John Beckwith, now a well-known composer, musicologist and critic in Toronto, writing in the Toronto Star concerning the concert, commented that the tympanist "was a real artist."

Arion Male Voice Choir under Frank Tupman will resume practices Monday, Sept. 11, at 8 p.m. on the third floor, 1138 Broughton Street.

They will be pleased to have anyone interested in joining attend this rehearsal or contact me by phone to the secretary at EV 2-6465.

St. Matthias Little Theatre Society will open its season with Kenneth Horne's comedy, "Yes and No." Unfortunately we have chosen dates—Sept. 27 to 30—that conflict with Victoria Theatre Guild's opening of "Visit to a Small Planet"—Sept. 29 to Oct. 7.

It is hoped, however, that some change can be made.

John Poulton directs "Yes and No" with the following cast: Pam Harris, Ann Toone, Roberta Riches, Jo Pepper, John Porteous, Kevin Hull and Stanley Bowles.

Getting together for a joint production this fall, are Victoria Gilbert and Sullivan Society and the Theatre Guild.

G and S choice is "Trial by Jury."

Off-stage report is that the guild has chosen "Family Album" by Noel Coward and that this charming one-acter will be directed by an experienced Canadian thespian new to Victoria.

The production will be seen at Oak Bay Junior High School.

True, I admitted. "But suppose Craigdarroch Castle could be turned into a semi-arena style theatre for all citizens to use actively and enjoy—and suppose that by having it there (like the Abbey Theatre in Ireland) one or two writers were developed who could make use of some of our colorful past in dramatic form—then history would come alive indeed and in what an ideal setting."

"Very true!" chorused the other two, their gloom momentarily lifting: "and can't you just visualize the hordes of tourists who would beat a path to such a monument as that?"

OFF-STAGE. There is much talk going on between local lads and lasses who are exchanging reminiscences concerning their summers in Banff, at UBC School of Fine Arts and at Stratford.

Fergus Heywood is the only one I have personally talked to so far. He was one of two instrumentalists—the other was

True Jazz Swan Song Sounds in N'orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The old men of jazz are once again belting out the joyous ragtime of yesteryear.

They've been brought back by a group of jazz buffs who want to revive the Negro bands that spawned jazz 50 years ago.

"This is the only place you'll hear this music now," says Grayson Mills, president of the New Orleans Society for the Preservation of Traditional Jazz.

"When these men die, there'll be no one around to play the music."

The bands are playing to standing-room audiences in New Orleans.

The jazzmen—some in their 70's and 80's, most in their 60's—a few in their 50's—include names like George Lewis, Kid Sheik, Pimp Miller, Jim Robinson, John Casimir, Kid Howard, Slow Drag Pavageau and Emmanuel Styles.

Once you get this stuff in your mind, it stays," Pavageau, 73, says.

They play in a small, bare room seating 17 people. The musicians call it Preservation Hall. There's no air-conditioning, no liquor, no admission charge, no showgirls. Just music. Voluntary contributions come through a kitty.

HALL PACKED

Six nights a week, some 600 to 1,000 persons pack the hall—standing, sitting on the floor, overflowing into the steamy New Orleans night—applauding and listening intently to the old-time jazz.

The crowds are new but the music is the same old magic.

"It was good music then," Kid Howard, 53, says. "It's good music now."

It's bouncy, heartfelt, sad-sweet, irresistible music. It's the closest you'll come today to pure, original jazz. This may well be its swan song.

(BB PLUS) "THE LAST SUNSET" (Odeon)—There are many kind things to be said about Universal's "The Last Sunset."

For instance, there is splendid color photography, some better-than-average acting, excitement, suspense and, in parts, a certain quality of beauty.

Unfortunately most of these desirable ingredients are lost in the rather awkward story as written for the screen by Dalton Trumbo as based on Howard Rigsby's novel, "Sun-down on Crazy Horse."

A story to have impact must, in the final analysis, be believable from start to finish.

But "The Last Sunset" becomes rather thin under the light of speculation exercised by the average adult patron.

The play starts off with U.S. Civil War veteran Joseph Cotten hiring killer Kirk Douglas to help him run his cattle to Texas in spite of Douglas' proposition of one-fifth the herd and Cotten's wife, Dorothy Malone, once an intimate pal of Douglas in the years of long ago.

If this isn't enough to believe, along comes peace officer Rock Hudson to pick up Douglas for his misdemeanors, but the men decide to delay their showdown until after the cattle drive.

Offshore Rights. Fight Passed Up

By GORDON BELL

Times Business Editor

Only about 1.7 million acres of offshore, potential oil lands were taken up by oil companies out of an estimated 14 million acres made available by the B.C. department of mines and petroleum resources Friday.

Notable absentee from the 27 operators who made application, and the eight who actually took up land, was Shell Oil Co. of Canada, which already holds a federal permit to explore 11 million acres off B.C. from halfway up the west coast of Vancouver Island into Heceta Strait.

Also notable was the fact that of the land taken up Friday under provincial permit less than 10 per cent selected by the Calgary and Edmonton Corp. and by Canadian Superior Oils — conflict with the Shell federal permit area and that only on the fringe.

Thus, while the opportunity to bring the federal-provincial ownership conflict into the open was present with this land disposal, none of the operators concerned were prepared to do so.

Provincial officials were unable to hazard a guess as to whether or not Shell would apply for a provincial permit before the Crown reserve is replaced next Friday on land not taken up.

LESS COSTLY?

Shell, with the tacit agreement of the other operators not to encroach on its area, could proceed with exploration under the much less costly federal permit. Ottawa's charge only five cents an acre for three years with the entire rental refundable if certain work is performed. The provincial fee is five cents an acre for one year, not refundable.

The province had intimated previously that it would not interfere with Shell's operations so long as they remained in the exploratory stages. However, there is no intention of relinquishing the provincial claim to offshore lands and director H. D. Forman, president of Mitsu in Japan before the province.

Actually, if the Shell Oil holding of 11 million acres is discounted, about half the remaining land was disposed of Friday and there might be a few more dispositions made next week.

Canadian Superior Oils took the largest permit for about 9,600 acres with C & E Corp. next with 480,000. Richfield and Pure Oil jointly took 132,000 acres off the mainland and just north of the U.S. border. Pure already holds permits in this area, while Richfield plans a drilling program at nearby Point Roberts.

Five independent operators took smaller permits.

Of the 33 parcels offered 21 were in the Gulf Islands area, five on the west coast of the island and the balance in Heceta Strait.

West Canadian Oil and Gas Ltd. and Canadian Delhi Oils Ltd. have worked out an amalgamation deal calling for Canadian Delhi to issue one share for each 3% shares of West Canadian.

Canadian Delhi will also make an alternative offer of $1.35 cents a share for half the holdings of each West Canadian shareholder.

The plan is to be submitted to shareholders of both companies early in December.

PACIFIC WESTERN AIRLINES LTD.

Pacific Western Airlines Ltd. has advised preferred shareholders that the dividend due this week will be passed and directed to future payments.

Reason given is that the loss July 1 of the airline's DEW-line contract had an adverse effect on earnings. However, the company stated, economies which have been effected are proving beneficial and a favorable year-end report is expected.

KITIMAT WORKERS BACK WITHIN MONTH

KITIMAT (CP)—The 1,400 Kitimat and Keman workers put out of work by rock falls in the power tunnel will be back at work within a month.

Aluminum Company of Canada spokesman said Friday about 500 will start back at work Wednesday and others will start as work develops for them.

The men have been out of work since rock slides closed the 10-mile Keman power tunnel in June.

The company kept 200 men working around the clock to repair the damage.

Wheat Crop Worst In 24 Years

OTTAWA (CP)—This summer's scorching Prairie drought has slashed Canada's wheat crop this year to an anticipated 252,495,000 bushels—smallest crop since the so-called "dirty thirties" hit the west.

It is also expected to spell the end of an eight-year period of heavy surplus wheat stockpiles.

The wheat crop forecast Friday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics would be 49 per cent below last year's 489,624,000 bushels and the worst since the 1937 disaster year when only 180,200,000 bushels were harvested. The 10-year average for 1951-60 is 497,400,000 bushels.

Other Prairie crops are reported to have suffered almost as heavily, with the prospective oats crop down 42 per cent, barley down 45 per cent and flaxseed down 37 per cent.

RAIL LABOR RESTLESS

An unsettled labor situation developed in the railhead industry this week.

A U.S. district court in Philadelphia issued an injunction preventing the Transport Workers Union from striking against the Pennsylvania Railroad.

In another development, unions representing 600,000 workers in freight handlers and maintenance and service crafts demanded a 25-cent an hour wage increase and at least six months' advance notice of job layoffs.

Steel production last week exceeded 2,000,000 tons for the first time since early June. The industry, however, still was operating below 70 per cent of capacity.

LOOKS AT SPORTS.

The only difference between Victoria and Calgary, ostensibly, is 750 miles, oil wells and the antiquity of the retired rich.

There are a few minor differences, of course. Weather for one. We have all kinds of it. Calgary has none to speak of. What they do have is unspeakable... you burn or freeze alternately and annually.

Yet another difference, however, has been unearthed. Derek Warren—Victoria's man about cricket, made the discovery. A lanky, almost laconic ex-Britisher, Warren has won a promotional transfer to the Foothills Metropolis.

An estates administrator ("when I tell people what I do they often look at me like they're looking at a mortician, when actually I handle a lot of business for people still living"), Warren expressed surprise at the interest of Calgarians in cricket.

"I think nothing of it," he was told. "Calgary is the kind of town where if you want to organize a tiddly-winks league you'll have five teams entered before you know it."

This flabbergasted him. Particularly in view of the fact that it took Oak Bay municipal council 18 long months to agree that cricket at Windsor Park was feasible, practical and not harmful to the grass crop.

Warren's point, made without rancor, is that while Victorians are sedentary in certain matters athletic, Calgarians tend to symbolize the "get up and go" characteristics of the west.

"They even held the Canadian cricket championships in Calgary this year," he said. "Put on a splendid show, too."

Puddle Bowl Suits Viewers, Vandals

Cricket is not exactly the mainstay of Victoria's athletic life. But in no small measure to his efforts as a kind of liaison man between the game and news media, it has gained a respectable measure of prestige among those who chronicle sporting events.

Primary among his efforts was securing Windsor Park. Since cricketers already had the use of University School grounds and Beacon Hill, why bother with Windsor?

"Three reasons, actually," he said. "First, University Hill is just fair. Beacon Hill is terrible. And we needed a third pitch to take care of all our teams."

To a cricket knothead his appraisal of Beacon Hill was perplexing. Set in a natural bowl, it seemed ideal.

"The bowl is fine—for viewing," he said. "But the grass is too long. And underneath is a sort of mulch. Below that it's spongy. Can't be helped really. All winter long it's just a huge mud puddle."

"Besides, the trees which ring it form a wicked background for the batsmen. When the bowler raises his arm, the ball seems to come right out of the trees. We tried to overcome this by building a permanent backstop. Mounted a huge piece of canvas on the back of an old truck."

Did it work?

"For a while," he said. "Then one day we came to the park and found only the truck. I don't know what happened to the canvas. I suppose the vandals took the frame for kindling."

Simple Matter of Economics, Wot?

If Beacon Hill is suitable only for innocent codgers and young innocents, why don't cricketers pull up their silly mid-off and abandon it?

"It's on the tourist path and it does offer spectators that good view," Warren explained. He grinned. "Our collections there are always double any other park. That's the main reason we stay."

His replacement, Warren said, is one Jack Adams. "A fine fellow," I'm sure he is. "But the pen brigade will miss Mr. Warren. They appreciated his sincerity even when they suspected he was pulling their leg when he spoke of things like 'leg over wicket' and 'popping creases.'

British Need Miracle To Wrest Walker Cup

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff Reporter

SEATTLE—The historic and coveted Walker Cup, one of the truly biennials in international sports, has been resting for the past two days on the lawn in front of the chalet-like edifice that is Seattle Golf Club.

The cup is not going to far.

After watching the United States stomp Great Britain 40 to 13 in the Scottish foursome matches Friday, nobody expects the impressive piece of golf silverware to leave American soil at this time.

The biennial golf classic was to wind up with eight singles matches today, and only a comeback of astounding proportions would be able to save the Britons. Nobody—not even team captain Charles Lawrie—expects the British to win seven of the eight matches.

That is what was required of the British.

The Americans simply have too many big guns and this 18th tournament continues to be one of amateur sport's most one-sided competitions.

For a few hours around lunch time on Friday, however, hope was turning a few well-meaning handsprings in the hearts of the British.

CHARLIE COE

If the draw was a victory, it was the only one the British managed to experience in Seattle heading into today's play.

Ability to start quickly cost the British their best chance. The U.S. sweep in the foursomes—the fifth since the matches first started in 1922—came about this way:

One bad pitch—and a game and perhaps a pennant go down the drain.

That's the sad lament of Don Mossi and the Detroit Tigers today after the New York Yankees scored a 1-0 victory in the opener of their crucial three-game series and moved 2½ games ahead in the American League race.

the idle Cincinnati Reds' National League lead to 2½ games with a 4-3 triumph over the Milwaukee Braves.

TIME RUNNING OUT ON MANTLE, MARIS

NEW YORK (UPI)—The odds are beginning to swing against New York Yankee slingers Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle in their efforts to equal, or surpass Babe Ruth's all-time record of 60 home runs in one season.

With 51 homers, Maris is still six games ahead of the Ruth 1927 pace but Mantle's 48 homers leave him only one game ahead of the pace.

The comparison becomes increasingly deceptive as the season continues because Ruth hit 17 homers in September, including 10 in the Yankees' final 16 games, in his record 1927 season.

Here is how the two Yankee slingers stand with Ruth's record:

	W	L	Pct	GBL
Maris	51	58	.482	27
Mantle	48	52	.454	18
Ruth	51	58	.482	27

ard and sent 65,566 fans home with the conviction that the Yankees just don't lose the "big ones."

"I never pitched a better game," moaned Mossi, who suffered his fourth defeat against 14 victories. "The only bad pitch I made was the one Skowron hit."

Whitey Ford, Bud Daley and Luis Arroyo collaborated in a seven-hitter for the Yankees, with Arroyo picking up his 12th win. Ford retired with a strained hip muscle after 4½ innings and Daley continued the shutout pitching through the eighth when he left for a pinch-hitter.

Mossi retired Maris and Mantle to open the ninth but Howard and Yogi Berra singled to set the stage for Skowron's game-winning blow. The victory assured the Yankees of holding first place even if the Tigers win the last two games of the series.

AROUND THE ISLAND

Examination Under Way
On 'Red Tide' Outbreak

COURTENAY — Toxicity tests are being made in Nanaimo to determine possible danger from an outbreak of 'red tide' in local waters.

It manifests itself as a reddish scum on the water, and is caused by countless millions of tiny organisms. There are many types, but only a few are poisonous.

Toxic types render shellfish in the area unfit for human consumption under any circumstances.

NANAIMO — A progress payment of $81,474 has been made to the Regional Hospital here, health minister Eric Martin reported Friday.

The 160-bed hospital, under construction for the past 11 months, is expected to be completed by next summer. The provincial government will pay one-half of the $3,400,000 cost.

PORT ALBERNI — A New Westminster man is in hospital today being treated for Burns to his legs following an accident aboard a barge here Friday.

Valere Coupal, an employee of Fraser River Piledrivers Ltd., was washing a front-end loader aboard the barge when a bucket of gasoline caught fire. He kicked the bucket overboard and the flames spread over the surface of the water. Coupal's burns are reported quite serious but his condition is good.

ALBERNI — Henry Cross was fined $25 with $5 costs on Thursday after he pleaded guilty in court here to refusing to fight a fire.

Similar fines were imposed on James Spencer, charged with failing to extinguish a lighted cigarette, and Alf Tilley, charged with failing to take steps to extinguish a fire. All charges were laid under the Forestry Act.

COURTENAY — Ald. F. S. Williams, president of Courtenay Recreation Association, says the association has been advised an American timber company will take a second look at a request to improve Forbidden Plateau ski runs.

A letter from Northern Development Ltd., of Everett Wash., indicated company personnel will look over Mount Becher property and come up with a proposal for its future use, Ald. Williams said.

Last April Scott Paper Co., parent firm of Northern Development, turned down a request to expand ski runs on logged-off land and withdrew previous privileges granted to clear away brush.

Matter was reopened after shoppers threatened to boycott company products in local supermarkets.

COURTENAY — New season of Comox District Canadian Club will be opened by talk on the country's defence problems in the nuclear age by Gen. Charles Foukes, recently retired chief of staff.

His visit here Sept. 18 will be part of his first speaking tour since he retired from the army last May.

COST OF B.C. FIRES $3,532,224 TO DATE

Forest fires have cost the B.C. government $3,532,224 so far this year.

Only rain saved the province from a bigger bill, as the past week was looking like one of the worst of 1961, with costs totalling $940,724 for seven days.

Although clear weather is expected over the weekend, the rain was heavy enough to effectively douse most of the worst blazes and cut hazards in most areas to low.

At this time last year firefighting costs totalled $4,552,437.

There have been 4,324 fires this year, compared with 3,704 at the same time in 1960.

District Building Hits High Gear

Construction activity barreled ahead in high gear last month, Saanich and Esquimalt building departments reported Friday.

Saanich issued 76 permits, valued at $1,539,550 during August, including 27 dwellings worth $342,000, compared with 101 permits worth $506,530 a year ago, including 31 dwellings valued at $342,700.

This brought the eight-month totals to 759 permits worth $6,383,383 compared with 592 permits worth $4,333,350 during the comparable period in 1960.

Esquimalt issued 21 permits worth $87,196 including four dwellings valued at $54,300 last month, compared with 18 permits worth $43,900, including one $17,500 dwelling, in August, 1960.

The year's eight months total stands at 140 permits worth $1,482,565, compared with 106 permits valued at $543,000 during the corresponding period last year.

Chief Clerk, Chief Adviser

By FRANK RUTTER

For decades, a slim, sartorially-stylish, silver-haired figure padded softly down the corridor to the premier's office in the Legislative Buildings, bearing the innermost secrets of government.

Flourishing cigarette holder and in sibilant tones, he talked money into the ears of four premiers of British Columbia.

But now John Villiers Fisher, PhD, LLD (hon.), is on his way to London and his last post after 41 years in government service.

He has risen from chief clerk at the Vernon regional office through all the ranks of the treasury to the job of B.C. agent-general in England, which he officially takes over Oct. 1.

Dr. Fisher might be called "the man who invented contingent liabilities."

It was during his reign as deputy minister and economic adviser to Premier Bennett that the province accomplished a "debt-free" status by eliminating all direct borrowing and setting up provincial guarantees and Crown agencies with power to build contingent liabilities, or "indirect debt," with government control.

From 1952 B.C.'s direct debt has diminished $222,353,000 to zero, while the contingent liabilities have risen from $58,000,000 to $601,000,000 before the B.C. Electric takeover this August. They now become well over a billion dollars.

How much of Dr. Fisher's advice went into the Social Credit debt-free policy will probably never be known, for seldom has a civil servant been so careful in covering his tracks, and so discreet in his public statements.

Dr. Fisher claimed that he had a hand in every budget since 1923, when he moved from Vernon to Victoria as a treasury economic researcher.

He certainly had both hands in budgets from the 1930s as adviser to the late John Hart and he finally became deputy finance minister in 1946. He held this post under Premier Bennett until 1957, when he became economic adviser to the government and eventually drew the largest salary of any civil servant in the buildings—$17,500 a year.

Among his many other tasks in government service, Dr. Fisher was made commissioner for the City and District of North Vancouver in 1934 and for the City of Eenie in 1935.

His job was to get them out of debt, for both municipalities were broke.

He got Eenie completely in the black by 1946, and its assessments slashed one-third.

Other roles he played in B.C.'s government over the years include that of secretary to the Toll Authority, adviser to the Power Commission and as a member of the Columbia River hydro negotiating committee.

Dr. Fisher was born in Italy in 1892, and his was the fine hand which is suspected of guiding many a coup of fiscal ingenuity.

A tribute to his ability—the fact that, although the politics of premiers changed five times, Dr. Fisher stayed on undaunted.

Although they do tell the story that on the day after Social Credit won its first election in 1952, he slipped into the Provincial Library for a few hours to find out what exactly this strange new party's policies were.

Around the Buildings: Liberal leader Ray Perra leaves in mid-month for a two-week speaking tour in Saskatchewan with fiery Ross Thatcher, who's banking on an upset in the election expected there any time now that Premier Tommy Douglas has become leader of the New Democratic Party.

Canada's Young Liberals have a convention at Banff Sept. 22, with Lester B. Pearson among guests.

B.C. Conservatives have a convention at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 21 to weld the rift with federal Tories. Date for a leadership convention will probably be set then. The job is up for grabs; any takers?

Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace is off to Prince George Wednesday to be guest speaker at official opening ceremonies for a new public library. Control of libraries was shifted to his department from education at the winter session of the legislature.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Members of the Victoria Art Gallery will have a chance to rent original Canadian paintings on Tuesday evening at 7:30 as more than 170 paintings were made available to the gallery's picture loan scheme.

This is to be the first monthly loan of the 1961-1962 season, and the paintings are on display to the public until 8 p.m.

A young crow, believed by its 10-year-old captor to be "pretty tame, because he'll eat out of your hand," is being kept by Lorrie Tschritter at 4028 Cumberland in the hope that the owner will come and claim it.

He found it at about 3:30 Friday afternoon, and kept it in a cage overnight.

Would-be mountain climber James Passmore, 10, of 510 Marigold, was plucked from a near-sheer rock face some 30 feet above Trans-Canada Highway at Bute Friday afternoon.

Saanich firemen, alerted by police when a prowler heard the boy's cries for help, said he "froze" to the cliffside when climbing with a friend at about 4:30.

Tuesday Meetings Victoria Kiwanis Club: Noon, Empress Hotel. Insp. Brook Douglas, city traffic department, "Four Phases of Police Activity."

93RD FALL FAIR

Entry Record At Saanich

A predicted record entry of 2,544 exhibits was on display today for the opening of the 93rd consecutive Saanich Fair at Saanichton.

The oldest country fair in the West was to be attended at 2:30 p.m. by Lieutenant-Governor G. R. Pearkes and his party, although the official opening by Agriculture Minister Frank Richter is not until 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Ladies' work shows a heavy increase with 182 exhibits: jams and preserves show 125 and the junior section (under 14 years) 120 items.

Typical of Victoria, the "Garden City," and Saanich, the "Garden of Vancouver Island," biggest entry of the 27 sections was in flowers, at 396, which is 96 more than in last year's show.

And the biggest poultry entry ever is recorded this year with 273 competitors.

The vegetable section, 302, also shows a big jump; house hold arts is up at 269, as are fruits at 145 entries.

Ladies' work shows a heavy increase with 182 exhibits: jams and preserves show 125 and the junior section (under 14 years) 120 items.

Some others: sheep 87, honey 38, eggs 24, goats 85, photography 38, Jerseys 96, Ayrshires 47, Holsteins 79, shorthorns 45, swine 36, field crops 40, grains and grasses 43.

Missing this year will be the well-known Angus showing of Woodstock, bringing the entry in this class down to 33.

Reason for its absence is that the animals were shown at the Pacific National Exhibition and could not get back from Vancouver in time.

Besides exhibits there is a

midway, games, horseback events and Highland dancing and piping.

That is he is looking for peace and quiet.

"I don't want to talk about wars or the threat of wars," said General Carl Spaatz, former commander-in-chief of the United States Air Force in Europe in 1944 and in the Pacific in 1945.

Instead, the stocky, 70-year-old general and his wife strolled happily in the Empress Hotel gardens and admired the city's flowers and gardens.

But the grim set of his jaw recalled that General Spaatz

once directed the smashing of Germany from the air and the final strategic bombing of Japan by B-29s in 1945.

HIS COMMAND

The atom-bomb missions

that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki were also under his command.

"All that is past history now," rapped the general who is renowned for his terse utterances. As a subordinate once said of him: "He uses words as if they cost him money."

A fearless combat aviator, General Spaatz was one of a small group of air-minded officers who kept the U.S. Army Corps flying after the First World War, in which he commanded the 31st Aero Squadron in France and received the Distinguished Service Cross.

They called him "The Flying Dutchman."

GREW WITH IT

From then on he was wedded to U.S. Army aviation and grew up with it. By the time of Pearl Harbor he was a brigadier general and promotion to major general followed soon after.

At first he wasn't keen on being a general because it would cut out his flying. And after he became one, it took the combined persuasion of his staff and the official frowns of General Dwight Eisenhower to stop him going on combat missions himself.

His war planes blasted Hitler's armies in North Africa, then in Sicily, Italy and Germany.

USAF LEADER

He commanded the U.S. Air

Forces in Europe from before the invasion of France until

VE-Day; then moved to the Pacific to add his crushing might to the victory over

Japan.

He once said that the "ceaseless pulverizing" of Japan's war potential by B-29s was more important to victory than atom bombs. In his opinion

Japan had already been beaten before the A-bombs were dropped.

But in Victoria today General Spaatz is not discussing the A-bombs, H-bombs or any other kind of bombs.

"We are enjoying our first visit to Western Canada," he said.

Long Sticks and Prayers Used in Cholera Fight

By RUKMINI DEVI

Canadian Press Correspondent
BANARAS, India (CP)—For the pious in this holy city of Hinduism time stands still. Nothing has changed in five centuries.

While a majority of its 400,000 citizens have taken anti-cholera inoculations, the priests and other orthodox people are fighting the current epidemic with long sticks and non-stop prayers.

Boycotting the government health authorities, they have organized volunteers to guard their streets against the entry of the "goddess" of cholera. It is their belief that the epidemic is caused by an evil spirit, amenable only to strong-arm tactics or prayers.

A dozen burly men brandishing long sticks stand at the entrance to each street in that part of the town in which the religious minded live. Day and night they are on the lookout for the evil goddess.

When cholera hits a locality, the pious citizens make an idol of the goddess with wheat flour and despatch it secretly out of the area. They think that the epidemic also goes out with the goddess to hit some other section of the city.

It is the duty of the volunteers to see that the evil goddess is not smuggled into their locality. Anyone who is suspected of the act is beaten.

Meanwhile, the bells of Banaras temples chime endlessly as orthodox men and women pray to drive away the naughty goddess who has already claimed some 50 lives in the city.

The Uttar Pradesh state authorities have sent in well-equipped medical vans and half the population of the city have been inoculated. But the priests and their followers have refused to co-operate. In fact, they think that government is only angering the cholera goddess by its inoculation program.

Prayers are being offered not only to the goddess but for the "enlightenment" of the government.

One of the priests stated that the cholera epidemic harassing Banaras was to be attributed to "god's anxiety to test the spiritual discipline of the people."

One wealthy Banaras merchant has pledged that if the goddess retreats from the city he would donate 10,000 rupees, about $2,000, to temple charities.

Students of the great Banaras Hindu University, one of India's most modern institutions, have organized a door-to-door campaign to persuade the religious-minded minority to submit to inoculations.

Montreal (CP)—Rev. Paul Chan, a Chinese Presbyterian minister, Friday was arraigned on charges connected with the smuggling of Chinese immigrants into Canada.

Rev. Chan, already awaiting trial on similar charges laid last year after an RCMP investigation into what has been called a million-dollar racket, pleaded not guilty to charges of helping a Chinese enter Canada from Hong Kong with forged documents.

Three other members of Montreal's Chinese community also pleaded not guilty Thursday to similar charges. Wilbur Bruce Wong, 45, Charles Tinch, 66, and Tom Chuck, 69, were released on $950 bail each until preliminary hearing Sept. 21.

The regime told church authorities the minister also was guilty of keeping West Berlin identity papers and that he had protested against the Berlin border sealing.

Scharf is chairman of the council of the Evangelical Church, whose followers include most Germans under Communist rule. The council is the only major institution active in both East and West Germany.

"We Believe In Sharing" — Says Famous Hostess

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bananas grow next to the swimming pool at the F. Ronald Graham home—within sight of the perpetual snow of Mount Garibaldi.

Late in June hundreds crammed the lawns of the Point Grey mansion to celebrate a birthday party. Indians danced around a mammoth bonfire, built near a backdrop of tepees and totem poles. Buffalo turned on a spit.

And Mrs. Graham, charming châtelaine of a millionaire's estate, was there to advise and direct—a capacity that has made her socially famous in Vancouver.

"We believe in sharing what we have not only with the family but with the community," she says.

Strikingly attractive, good-humored, often ebullient, Mrs. Graham is a youthful-looking woman who presides over a family of 14 and 37 grandchildren.

Her parties make the 20-room Graham home a focus for fun and community service.

MORE THAN 1,000

Around the corner from the oversize, heated swimming pool—where bananas grow next to orchids in a glass arboretum—a vast, comfortably furnished recreation room has on occasions accommodated, with an overflow on the terrace, more than 1,000 for a party.

Once a week as many of the Grahams as can be mustered gather in the same room to watch a feature movie.

The Grahams moved to Northwest Marine Drive in 1946 and established their city showplace, built with money from a fortune Mr.

Graham amassed in an eastern sugar company and other ventures. Now semi-retired, Mr. Graham remains a director of many industrial and financial concerns across Canada.

They extended the house to each side of the original three-story structure. Its modern wings push out over lawns that fold away to the sea. Built on the south head of the harbor entrance, the home commands a wide view, north to Howe Sound and the mountains beyond, and east to the city.

Since 1946, with Mrs. Graham's blessing, hundreds of charitable organizations have brought thousands of guests into the house and grounds. Once she attended all the catered parties but lately has relinquished that role.

NOTHING STOLEN

Mrs. Graham remarked with pride that nothing has ever been stolen and cigarette burns have never marked carpets that cover a marble floor.

"We are an informal family that likes formal dinners and formal parties."

Mr. Graham's birthday party June 22 was a mixture of both. The family each year changes the background for the celebration—usually attended by hundreds. The motif has ranged around the world, with this year's pure North America.

The dining room, a part of the house that was added when the Grahams moved in, is well-appointed for the formal affairs. A long Sheraton table seats 38 at high-backed chairs. Other furnishings in the room are of satinwood.

On holiday trips to the Orient and Middle East, Mrs. Graham has gathered exotic furnishings and miniatures that fill a large living room. The history of Japan looks down from walls partly finished in rich silkwork; Jade is arranged inside glass cases; there are chests, chairs, lamps and tables from Japan, China, Tibet and Syria.

SHOT TIGER

Tall, slim and active, Mrs. Graham swims, rides and has played golf and fished. She once earned a diamond button for reeling in a coho salmon of more than 20 pounds with light tackle.

The evidence of one recent accomplishment—shooting a tiger and a leopard on an Indian sikkar—hangs on the recreation room wall.

Born in Hamilton, the daughter of Arthur W. White, Helen Graham says she is vitally interested in her husband's business affairs, which include chairmanship of the board of Canadian Collier Resources Limited, vice-presidency of Union Steamships and directorships of the Bank of Nova Scotia, National Trust Company and Sick's Brewery. They were married in 1940.

She reads detective stories, especially during her holidays at Banff, Alta., and books on philosophy. Her musical tastes are in the classics.

Preferring dresses rather than suits, she has suppliers here and in other North American cities who do her planning.

No "Sit-Down" Holidays During Next Three Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret MacLellan, who likes to "pin a trip around a conference," will spend the next three years doing just that.

She was named president of the Canadian Federation of University Women at their conference in London, Ont., recently and from now on she'll be saving up her holidays from work as librarian and "jack of all trades" in the combines investigation branch of the justice department here.

"I'll have no sit-down holidays in the foreseeable future," she said. "The first thing I'll do is set up a national office with a full-time secretary. What with my job and this new position, I couldn't carry out any functions without help."

The attractive, dark-haired Miss MacLellan, who has served on the executive of the CFWU since 1950, is looking forward to her role as head of the 10,000-member organization.

She says that in 1959, when she became chairman of the status of women committee for the International Federation of University Women, she didn't know the answers to the complex problems involved.

Since then she has solved the problem by learning where to seek the answers to her "fringe questions."

SHILL TRAVEL

A well-travelled and colorful story-weaver, Miss MacLellan attended the international federation meeting in Helsinki, Finland, in 1959 and next year will attend its meeting in Mexico City. Last summer, she represented the IFUW at the second United Nations congress on prevention of crime and treatment of offenders, held at London, England.

Interested in the prisoners rehabilitation field, she is an active executive of the Ottawa Elizabeth Fry Society, and a member of the International Society of Criminology.

Asked how she finds time for outside interests, she said she has learned to "scatter" herself within various volunteer organizations.

FORMER TEACHER

She was born in Claremont, 30 miles north of Toronto, where her father was a United Church clergyman. She is a graduate of the University of Toronto with honors in philosophy, English and history.

She spent a year at the Ontario College of Education and two years teaching Latin and physical education before joining the federal service some 20 years ago.

While a summer school teacher in a granary—"someone burned the school building out of spite"—in a tiny community in the Peace River Valley in Alberta, she was initiated into the art of painting.

"I was a tenderfoot on horseback and had to ride five miles every day with a lunch pail and a bag of oats tied to the saddle horn," she recalled. "I couldn't eat breakfast—I was so sick thinking about that ride."

Mrs. Mark C. Trueman and son, Jack, have returned to their Island Road home after taking summer theatre courses in Vancouver. Jack's next project will be planning the lighting for Victoria Theatre Guild's "Visit to a Small Planet," opening September 29. After a vacation from cooking, Mrs. Trueman is back "on the job" now, interspersed as it probably will be with more theatrical activity. (Irving Strickland Photo.)

Serious Study, Much Fun, in Summer Course

By ANNE MAYHEW

"Girls and boys who were slouching when they came, were walking with more assurance, speaking with clearer diction, when they left," says Mrs. Mark C. Trueman in summary of a seven-week course in theatre at University of British Columbia.

Mrs. Trueman, with her 17-year-old son Jack, an Oak Bay High School student, spent the summer in Fort Langley, along with hundreds of others in all ages and stages who were attending summer school.

About 70 enrolled in the dramatics course, enough to put on a well-criticized play, "The Dark of the Moon," and several one-act dramas.

Of course there are many reasons why one would wish to partake in this intensified combination of hard work and great fun. Mrs. Trueman's is easily said: "How little we all know about directing."

In the B.C. one-act play festival last March, one director was given an award in the Southern Vancouver Island section. In fact, only award given at all was to Mrs. Vanessa Lax, as supporting actress.

"This is what prompted me," explains Mrs. Trueman.

And what did Mrs. Trueman do with this course?

"Well," with a smile of amusement, "I didn't do the directing . . . I prompted." And prompting brought some strange experiences, bordering on the hilarious.

Director of main production was Robert Gill, of Heart House Theatre in Toronto. He didn't believe in ringing down the curtains between acts," Mrs. Trueman begins. "Instead, there was a complete blackout, with actors and actresses themselves moving prop on and off."

At one point, the boys swept off a huge folding V flat of the living room, complete with prompter caught inside. "I couldn't yell, for the audience would have heard me—I was simply squashed!"

In the B.C. one-act play festival last March, one director was given an award in the Southern Vancouver Island section. In fact, only award given at all was to Mrs. Vanessa Lax, as supporting actress.

a summer scholarship to study stagecraft and management.

Average age of drama students was from 16 to 22 years, so Mrs. Trueman was treated to a stage view of the younger generation.

"As a group," she says, "the acting students had a great vitality, and they were tremendous 'hams' . . . we knew who they were the minute they entered the large dining room."

They may have been "hams," but they were hard-working ones. It was startling to find that, not to mention the hours of lectures, there were two and a half hours of rehearsals every day, and, towards the end, every evening also.

Any other hallmarks of the actors as personalities?

"They are emotional . . . or they wouldn't be actors," says Mrs. Trueman. "And they are egotistical . . . they have to be."

In other words, the true actor is just the same as the rest of us, with ten added degrees of intensity.

Hostess

Mrs. Owen Fowler was hostess at her Thorpe Place home on Thursday when guests were members of the committee arranging the fashion show "Empress Extravaganza" sponsored by the Robert Burns McMicking Chapter, IODE, and to be held on Wednesday, Sept. 13, in the Empress Hotel. Those present were Mrs. A. Flinton, Mrs. E. Lowthian, Mrs. I. Major, Miss Christine MacNab and Miss M. Tindall. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

A BURSARY

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Thomson, 1039 Steeple Lane, have received word that their daughter, Mrs. Dennis Haner (June Thomson), has received a bursary from the provincial mental health association to enable her to attend the School of Social Work at University of British Columbia. Mrs. Haner lives in Vancouver where Mr. Haner received his bachelor of science degree from UBC last spring.

Provincial Fashion Designers Set Pace

In July the fashion houses of Paris, Rome and London set the pace for fall and winter 1961. Later a full week of shows in New York enabled the press to see how the top designers of United States interpreted the subtle changes which take place each season.

For the past two weeks thousands of spectators have attended the fashion shows in the Home Arts Building at the Pacific National Exhibition to see what our own British Columbia manufacturers have designed for this season.

A sparkling fountain with colored lights playing like jewels on the ever-moving water is the centerpiece of a garden setting around which the lovely models presented these costumes for all occasions.

Exciting news of this "made in B.C." fashion show is that the clothes are designed with men and women of the province in mind. Understanding our way of life and our climate, these sports would look most fetching in this season's popular item in the show is practical and wearable for us.

Damask

Unusual but quite clever was a black and white houndstooth worsted suit which appeared to be quite conventional until Pat slipped off the jacket which was entirely sleeveless to reveal a vest with sleeves.

The back-to-school set was most interested in a "flame rust" corduroy knee tickler skirt with tights and a coordinated shirt.

Golfing, bowling and curling are an important part of life in our province and a feminine participant in any of these sports would look most fetching in this season's popular item in the show is practical and wearable for us.

Literary? Then Literally Burn That Midnight Oil!

By PENNY SAVER

College calls. Don't let the thought of studying until early morning spoil the fun of meeting old friends and joining all the social activities. Buy a miniature kerosene lamp like the one that Penny saw today and enjoy burning the midnight oil. Copper lamp is also excellent as a patio decoration, hangs on the wall, stands on the mantel, is easy to carry (Florence Nightingale style—nurses take note, you too can be an angel of mercy with lamp held high) and adds a delightful atmosphere to barbecue meals. Kerosene (coal oil) from any gas station will keep the lamp light burning (the wick lasts indefinitely). Price is only 69 cents.

When the print grows blurry and you have the urge to lay your head on the desk (just for a minute), have a clean and colorful desk blotter ready for what will possibly be a protracted snooze. Ones that Penny saw today are 19 by 24 inches, come with black, brown or green corners and cost $2. For 15 cents, blotter paper can be changed to the grey that Penny chose (conservative for a change), or a gay coral, yellow, green, pink or blue to match the decor of your room.

What about that typewriter you will be using to write those magnificent essays? Is it old and rickety like Penny's but works marvelously if kept clean? If so, you'll want a cleaner that comes in a plasticine-like block about 2 by 3 1/2 inches in fashionable mauve shade. After preliminary warming up, you press material on surface to be cleaned. Ink and dirt are irresistibly attracted and can be folded inside the cleaner when you have finished.

Cleaner is also handy if you make a typing error. Before erasing, press the block on newly-typed letters to remove excess fresh ink and prevent eraser from smearing.

Cost of cleaner is only 75 cents and it can be used daily for months on end.

To find out where Penny discovered these items, call EV 2-3131.

How to Plan Your Dreams for Fall

September is a lovely time for dreaming of what you will do when the weather is not so warm . . . of the painting you've decided to buy . . . of the first fall party you will attend . . . of what you might do if you had a million dollars and a few months to spend in Italy.

Gibson's invite you to attend their presentation of FALL FASHIONS tailored to suit everyone's needs and budget . . . to dream with your eyes wide open . . . while models stroll from a background setting of the parliament buildings . . . down a footlighted ramp to the melodious strains of Reginald Stone at the organ.

We have planned it to be even greater than any previous presentation . . . with YOU in mind . . . Empress Hotel Ballroom, Sept. 13th. A limited number of tickets are still available for the first performance. Sorry, second performance is sold out.

Tickets may be purchased from members of the I.O.D.E. or Gibson's Ladies' Wear.

WHO WOULDN'T TAKE THIS LINE?

It's a tourist trap, but visiting Oregonian Thomas G. Tyner willingly took the bait—"Miss Victoria," Nina Holden. Don't tell Nina, but that's the victim's WIFE getting all steamed up on the left: "You can take this welcoming jazz a bit too far!" she fumed. All is now well, however. Shirley Tyner was eventually cooled down by her hubby, a Portland fire-

An Hour
Not Enough

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stipendiary Magistrate Roderick Haig-Brown estimated today that he gets about 75 cents an hour for sitting on the bench at Campbell River.

Mr. Haig-Brown, well-known as a naturalist and author, said in a telephone interview:

"Compensation for stipendiary magistrates in B.C. now is grossly inadequate. The system of payment is very bad—it's out of date and has no application."

He said B.C.'s stipendiary magistrates are paid by the case. They get $5 if the accused pleads guilty; $5 if he pleads not guilty and $10 for conducting a preliminary hearing.

He was commenting on a resolution adopted this week at the Canadian Bar Association convention at Winnipeg, urging appointment of more magistrates with better pay.

Three Aboard Lost Aircraft

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three RCAF planes today began a search for a small private plane missing on a flight between Williams Lake and here.

Pilot of the single-engine craft was RCMP Constable William Watchorn, 26, of the nearby Richmond detachment. With him were his father, Clarence, 41, and a cousin, Alex Edward Paul, 36, both of Blaikley, Alta.

RCAF Search and Rescue reported the plane missing Friday night and dispatched three planes to search the planned route to the Cariboo district centre. Two RCMP planes here were scheduled to take part in the search later today.

PARIS (AP) — French police said today they have seized important documents from one section of the widely scattered anti-government movement in France and arrested 20 of its members. The leaders are still in flight, however.

Acts of violence were blamed on the plotters, including a murder with a plastic bomb.

Electric Company by the British Columbia government was denounced by the Canadian Bar Association today in a resolution which empowered the Bar's B.C. section to question the provincial government "with respect to the deprivation of civil liberties and property rights inherent in the act."

The resolution over-rode opposition from some sections of the bar which wanted to water it down to a simple affirmation.

The resolution adopted specifically preserves property rights.

Soviet Blast Angers World

LONDON (CP) — Russia's nuclear test blast unleashed a fallout of criticism through the Western world today.

The Soviet action in remote Semipalatinsk drew stinging condemnation by governments, newspapers and ordinary citizens concerned with radioactive hazards to this and future generations.

"This news is deplorable," the British foreign office said. "The Russians must have been making active preparations while still talking at Geneva of a treaty banning such tests."

Japan strongly protested the Soviet Union's announced plans to resume nuclear testing in a note which apparently was being transmitted to Moscow when the Russian explosion was set off. The protest said the Moscow decision may compel other world powers to resume testing "and in turn lead mankind into the path of destruction."

READY FOR TALK

In Moscow, neither the Soviet press nor radio early today had made any mention of the explosion.

In Peking, Foreign Minister

Marshal Chen-yi said the Communist Chinese firmly back the Soviet decision but it "by no means implies a change in the consistent demand of our socialist countries for the prohibition of nuclear weapons and general disarmament."

READY FOR TALK

Chen-yi, speaking at a reception, said the Communist bloc was "ready at any time to hold negotiations on an equal footing with the Western powers" to solve the disarmament and nuclear weapon prohibition questions.

In Belgrade, Prime Minister Nehru told the conference of non-aligned countries the decision to resume testing increased the danger of war.

Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, also at Belgrade, said of the test explosion: "It is a shock for me and for you too. This shock shows what a big danger humanity is facing."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, in a Winnipeg speech Friday night, said Premier Khrushchev's move has put hope of a general disarmament agreement back for a "limitless" delay.

"I cannot believe that Khrushchev does not realize that by an overt act or by error or miscalculation, mankind may be obliterated," he said.

The prime minister also welcomed President Kennedy's assurance that the United States will not resume testing immediately.

Mr. Haig-Brown, well-known as a naturalist and author, said in a telephone interview:

"Compensation for stipendiary magistrates in B.C. now is grossly inadequate. The system of payment is very bad—it's out of date and has no application."

He said B.C.'s stipendiary magistrates are paid by the case. They get $5 if the accused pleads guilty; $5 if he pleads not guilty and $10 for conducting a preliminary hearing.

He was commenting on a resolution adopted this week at the Canadian Bar Association convention at Winnipeg, urging appointment of more magistrates with better pay.

Salesmen and Saleswomen

If making money doesn't interest you then this ad won't either.

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY

If someone were to tell you that you could increase your sales by at least 20 per cent in the next few weeks? You'd probably first ask, "how" and then follow it with "show me."

HOW: The new motivational selling methods taught in the Dale Carnegie Sales Lab.

"SHOW ME": PREVIEW SESSION

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 6—7:00 P.M.

STRATHCONA HOTEL

Please accept this invitation to attend as our guest and bring a salesman or woman friend with you.

If you happen to be in a procrastinating mood, and decide to just "think about it"—think for a moment longer as to whether you can really afford to pass over a 20 per cent or more increase in your sales.
